A LEGEND OF THE LAST WAR.
BY REV. JOHN TODD, D. D.

The land on the north side of Long Island Sound, along the southern borders of the good life state of Connecticut, is composed of hard hills covered with dwarf cedars, and the spreading juniper bush, and beautiful valleys which extend up among and between these hills. Particularly is this the case between New Haven and the Connecticut river. If the hills are barren, the valleys are proportionably fertile. This is decidedly the sunny side of Connecticut. Then the sound is a most beautiful sheet of water, whose gentle waves have made this whole shore a charming and beach. From any one of the hills which I have mentioned, the prospect is delightful. The eye takes in a wide expanse of waters, with vessels of every size, and name, gracefully moving in every direction under the hand of canvas, and ever and anon, the huge but beautiful steamboat is seen crowding her way past them all, sending out her two streams of smoke which seem to hang in the air as if not to be shaken off. On almost any day, the bright waters are now alive with all kinds of craft, while the distant shore of Long Island, and the many little islands scattered along the shores add to the beauty of the prospect.

But at the time of which I am about to speak, it was far otherwise. In the summer of 1813 no sail or craft of any kind was to be seen in the sound. The light-house kindled its nightly lamp, and the gulls on the low, flat islands kept up their night watches, but there was nothing to be seen. We were in war, and every wing of commerce was clipped. The British ships of war so completely blockaded the sound that nothing could move unless now and then a small boat was seen to glide along the shore, where, at a moment's warning, she could run into the mouth of some hidden creek, or skulk behind some island. It was a rare thing to see a sail.

On a bright September morning, on the top of one of those hills which overlooked the sound and which ran down till within a quarter of a mile of the water, stood a young man alone. He was dressed partly as a sailor and partly as a landsman, so that it would have been difficult to decide to which class he belonged. He was small of stature, firmly made, with an eye that flashed, and a mouth that shut as none but a determined man can shut his mouth. His face was not intellectual, but expressive of good humor, self-reliance, and perfect fearlessness. He was standing under a cedar, intently looking off upon the sound, and gazing upon a British frigate of the first class which lay anchored off about eight miles from the shore, and about midway between the two shores on the north and on the south. She lay so still and motionless, except as the tide veered her round once in six hours, that she could be compared to nothing except a huge black spider that lay coiled up in a corner of his den, ready to pounce upon any sophisticated fly that happened to come near. If a sloop or raking schooner, trusting to her quick heels, or the darkness of night, attempted to run past her, out flew her boats, each containing one heavy brass gun, and she was a prisoner at once. While the young man was watching her, all at once her sails were thrown off her yards, and in a time incredibly short to a landsman, her canvas was all spread; and the black creature now loomed up, white, lofty, symmetrical, and very beautiful. A slight breeze filled out her sails, and graceful and majestic was her movement. "There she goes bent on mischief as ever. She is now for Saybrook, or else for Deacon Mayo's farm. The villain! they are always on some mischief, and they never leave some rogues. I'll keep my eye on you old darkey, and it will cost one halter for my neck, or else I'll save Joe! I'll see you again to-night. That will, you wicked old jade!"

He stood and watched her closely. She went about five miles, and again the sails were furled, the anchors dropped, and she lay the same dark thing upon the waters; the young man then descended the hill and was lost among the cedars.

A little past midnight following the morning we have described, the frigate lay in the same place. No light was allowed on board of her, the officer of the watch paced the deck with a measured tread, and no noise was heard save the drawing of the chain from bow to stern every five minutes, lest some blow-up machine upon her keels or sides. The watch-boat lay off and around the ship, perhaps a mile or two distant, watching to hear or see anything that might stir. Presently the oars of a boat were heard, muffled indeed, but still plainly heard approaching. The nearest boat sent up a small rocket, a signal to the other boats. In an instant they were in motion, and by the time the stranger laid close near, there were four of these guard-boats ready to fall upon her. When near enough, she was hailed in a suppressed voice, and answered "Harvey."

"All right."

"What have you got?"

"A load of nice apples."

One of the guard boats attended "Harvey" up to the ship's side, and reported to the officer of the deck. "Come aboard," was the next command, and a young man ran up the ladder and stood on deck. The first gave the officer a handful of apples, and he was then allowed to bring what he had on board, and after paying a heavy toll to the officer, was allowed to sell the rest to the crew. He mingled with the men and listened to the tones of every voice, but was evidently disappointed. He listened for a voice which was not there. He was lingering and haggling to spin out his time as far as possible, when the officer called him.

"Harvey, shouldn't you be off?"

"I can't take all," said Harvey, in the true Yankee trade-with-no-tune.

"Well, the next watch will be called shortly. But what did you say about Deacon Mayo's farm? Did you say there are many cattle there?"

"It's a great farm, your honor, and the deacon usually keeps a great many cattle there. Indeed, I saw many there this very day." (The eye of the young man laughed; but it was dark, and his eye could not be seen. He had omitted to add that he had that day walked several miles to warn the deacon that the ship of war was near his farm, and that in consequence, every hoof had been driven away that evening.)

"Good. We want some fresh meat. For though our good ship is called 'The Wessel,' not a mouse can she catch passing this way. We'll try the deacon's beef."

By this time the bell rung, and the new watch was called. Harvey, as he was called, mingled with the new-comers, joked, talked Yankee, sold apples, and was very busy. At length he edged his way up to a tall, noble fellow, who went by the name of Joe Strange.

"Don't you love apples, Joe?"

"Yes, but I've not a shov in my locker. I've nothing to buy with, and you land lubbers don't give away things."

"Yes, we do, sometimes. See now if we don't. Here's a Hog's head," Joe started. "And here's a Loomis' smoking, and here's a Jack-apple!" In a low voice he added: "It grew in the lane, and was picked by my sister Lucy." Joe Strange said nothing, but as he took the apples Harvey felt him shake.

"Here, here," said Harvey, handing any apple he could find in his measure. He felt well assured that Joe Strange would take good care of his. In a few moments more, Harvey was in his empty boat carefully rowing for the shore, and by daylight he was up in a little creek, Eel Creek, where his boat was moored, and he went up among the bushes to lie down and rest. When he awoke from a short but sound sleep, the sun was already risen. He looked off towards the ship, and there she lay motionless and dark. It seems like a dream," said he to himself, "that I have actually been off to the ship three times alone—that I have actually found my old friend and neighbor, Joseph Collins, on board, shut up as a sailor! What would his old father and mother say, what would they say if they only knew it, poor fellows! I know him though, he did not know me the first time that I went aboard. But that apple! it will deliver or destroy him! and my own neck! I were I to be caught here trading with the enemy's ship, I should be hung or shot. I did it to rescue a friend would avail, for the simple reason that I could not prove my motives to be such. And if on the ship they should discover me tampering and trying to cut away one of their men, they would hang me at the yard arm! But I'm in for it, and I must and will rescue Joseph, if it is in my power. But I have a hard day's work before me."

It was late in the morning before Joe Strange, as he was called, could steal a moment to be alone, and it was then only as the officer of the deck bid him go aloft and secure a rope which seemed to have parted. Aloft he went, and having performed the duty, stopped a moment and took out an apple from his pocket. It was a fair looking apple, but as he examined it he saw that it must have been cut in two and nicely fastened together again, with a very fine thread. On opening it he found a small roll of paper, on which was written: "You are not forgotten. If you wish to see the tree on which I grew, the next time you go ashore, day or night, contrive to lose your hat just before you land." Twice he read the words, then put the paper into his mouth, to be spit out by piece meal, as he had opportunity. Taking a large nail from his pocket, he thrust it through the two sides of the apple, and threw it overboard. Its fall attracted the notice of the sentinel, but before he could think what it might be, it was out of sight. Joe came now to the deck with a buoyancy of step to which he had long been a stranger.

(To be concluded.)

Old Line Whigs.—The followers of Douglas in this state are very fearful that the whig party are about to be swallowed up by the abolitionists. In fact they proceeded in their convention, in an endeavor to break the force of the Nebraska vote to "denounce" every Anti-Nebraska man as a red hot, god-damned abolitionist, ready at once to pull down the pillars of the constitution and rend the Union in pieces!

The organs of the party at the south follow suit, our friends of the State Register being particularly unhappy on that account. Says the Register: "To believe that the old line whig party of this region, peopled mostly by men of southern birth, will permit such a party to rule them, is calculating in opposition to every suggestion of common sense and experience. The old Henry Clay whigs will never be betrayed into such revolting alliance. The name of 'whig,' potent as it may be with them, will not be strong enough to bind them to an organization contemplating a series of measures which, if successful, may destroy forever, this happy republic."

We do not know which the "old line whigs" in the Register's region would consider the worst, to be ruled by abolitionists or by the compromise breaking, harbor vetoing, abolition appointing party of Senator Douglas and Gen. Pierce.

The Register, if it really has such a horror of abolitionists, should cut loose from the party to which it belongs, before advising "old line whigs" what to do. It should not forget that the prominent government offices of this state are held by abolitionists, who were recommended by Senator Douglas, and who "betrayed" their party into the revolting alliance with men, who had publicly held him up to indignation for his views upon the subject of slavery.

When our good friends the democracy, who live among whigs of "southern birth," purge their own party of abolitionism, we think it will be ample time to give their counsel, and advice as to what whigs had better do in the premises.—Chicago Journal.

REMARKABLE ESCAPE.—During one of those violent thunder storms which occurred in this vicinity a week or two since, the house of Mr. Naigle, a short distance from this village was struck by lightning. Mr. J. S. Simonton and Mr. Smith, who happened to be out hunting, stopped in at Mr. Naigle's to wait for the shower to pass, and while in the house, Mr. Simonton set down his gun, which was a double barrel and both were loaded, in the corner, and took a seat not more than two feet from it. The fluid passed in at the chimney, down that to the top of the gun and down the outside of the gun, blowing the stock to pieces but discharging neither barrel, and killing Mr. S's dog, which lay at his feet. It was one of the most remarkable escapes from being instantly killed we have heard of for a long time, yet no person was seriously injured.—La Crosse Republican.

CORNS.—We have taken especial pains to make enquiries of our farmers as we have seen them in town, as to their crops in our section of country, and they all agree in saying that never before have they known of a more successful yield, or of its being better secured. The fall crops too are progressing finely. Corn promises abundantly, and in fact all kinds of produce appears to thrive here with special luxuriance. In Crosse county is a great place for farming, and it even astonishes western men to witness the productivity of the soil.—Id.

THE CORN CRUP.—Late accounts confirm the previous reports, that the corn crop in the lower and middle parts of this state and Missouri are a failure, and prices in that vicinity are advancing accordingly. The St. Louis News says, that farmers from the interior counties of Missouri are purchasing corn in St. Louis. A gentleman writing from Pike county, Illinois, says that not a bushel can be bought in his neighborhood for less than 40 cents a bushel. In this vicinity, and the northern part of the state generally, and in Wisconsin and Iowa, we hear that the corn crop promises remarkably well.—Glen Gazette.

Daniel Sullivan, who was arrested about three weeks ago in Janesville for the murder of Barney Caffrey, had his examination a few days ago in Milwaukee and acquitted, it being proved by the physicians that the man died of cholera.—Waukesha Democrat.

The last congress made appropriations of more than $30,000,000.

Spoke of the Burr.—A lady correspondent of the Washington Union, who has been "going down to the sea" at Cape Island, gives the following description of the aquatic enjoyments of the place:

The attendant upon the bath, was taking a prominent part in the conversation, as usual, while immediately behind her crouched her daughter, a negro girl of twelve or thirteen years of age, laughing, and rolling the whites of her eyes in ecstasy at all that was going forward. Besides a large tub of water in the center of the bath, kneeling or sat several ladies, just from the surf, in all the various stages of disrobing; each intent upon her own arrangement, and utterly regardless of what was passing around her. Others were preparing for the bath, laying aside their dresses, or rather suffering them to be laid aside by their maids whilst the latest comers were removing their shawls and bonnets, and exchanging greetings with their acquaintances.

For the first few moments we were deafened and bewildered, the sight of some dozen females, only partially dressed, and that in garments perfectly saturated with sea water—the busy waiting maids passing and re-passing; or drying and conching the streaming hair of their mistresses—the subdued laughter and whispered gossip of a body of lovely, chatting girls, murmuring along in an under current of sound—parades of romping children, apparently quite indifferent to the dense atmosphere, which made us struggle for breath—and to cynicism, the sudden bursting forth of a chorus of girlish voices into one of the wildest, sweetest of negro melodies; that was caught up and sung back by the roar of the waves without—all combined to form a picture odd indeed.

Following the example of others, we exchanged our double wrapper for a woolen bathing dress, covered our hair, and, with the friend who had accompanied us, we hastily made our exit from this crowded Babel, and on crossing the threshold we were met by our male escort equipped for the sea. The sight outside that met our vision was still more bewildering than the one we had left. The sight of nearly one thousand persons in various costumes—the shrill, laughing cries of the bathers heard above the roar of the surf—parties of children in the arms of nurses, struggling for breath—the ladies, many in bright plaid dresses, with fancifully trimmed straw hats on their heads, and to end all, the appearance of the bathers as they came out, looking like a congregation of resuscitated corpses, fanned into life, all combine to form a picture like the illusion of a dream, almost leaving the beholder in doubt whether that on which he looks is indeed reality, or the mere creation of a disordered brain. There is nothing very exclusive in the bath here, where the bells are placed in juxtaposition with her waiting maids; indeed, it would be difficult to distinguish them, as no costume in the world lends itself more readily or more conveniently to the purpose of disguise. One peculiarity is the utter disregard of many of the male bathers to being "knocked down by the breakers and drowned." They will move out and out, and when warned that they are almost outside the breakers, they look as though they wondered at the wanton waste of words bestowed upon so insignificant a piece of information. How many of these reckless bathers escape drowning we cannot take upon ourselves to explain.

A LEGEND OF THE LAST WAR.
BY REV. JOHN TODD, D. D.

The land on the north side of Long Island Sound, along the southern border of the good hills of Connecticut, is composed of rolling hills covered with dwarf cedars, and the spreading juniper bush, and beautiful valleys which extend up among and between these hills. Particularly in this case between New Haven and the Connecticut river. If the hills are barren, the valleys are proportionately fertile. This is decidedly the sunny side of Connecticut. There the sound is a most beautiful sheet of water, whose gentle waves have made this whole shore a charming beach. From any one of the hills which I have mentioned, the prospect is delightful. The eye takes in a wide expanse of waters, with vessels of every size and name, gracefully moving in every direction under their load of canvas, and ever and anon, the huge but beautiful steamboat is seen crowding her way past them all, sending out her two streams of smoke which seem to hang to her as if to be shaken off. On almost any day, the bright waters are now alive with all kinds of craft, while the distant shore of Long Island, and the many little islands scattered along the shores add to the beauty of the prospect.

But at the time of which I am about to speak, it was far otherwise. In the summer of 1813 no sail or craft of any kind was to be seen in the sound. The light-house kindled its nightly lamp, and the gulls on the low, flat islands kept up their night watches, but there was nothing to be benefited. We were in war, and every wing of commerce was clipped. The British ships of war so completely blockaded the sound that nothing could move unless now and then a small boat was seen to glide along the shore, where, at a moment's warning, she could run into the mouth of some hidden creek, or skulk behind some island. It was a rare thing to see a sail.

On a bright September morning, on the top of one of those hills which overlooked the sound and which ran down till within a quarter of a mile of the water, stood a young man alone. He was dressed partly as a sailor and partly as a landsman, so that it would have been difficult to decide to which class he belonged. He was small of stature, firmly made, with an eye that flashed, and a mouth that shut as one bit a determined man can shut his mouth. His face was not intellectual, but expressive of good humor, self-reliance, and perfect fearlessness. He was standing under a cedar, intently looking off upon the sound, and gazing upon a British frigate of the first class which lay anchored off about eight miles from the shore, and about midway between the two shores on the north and on the south. She lay so still and motionless, except as the tide veered her round once in six hours, that she could be compared to nothing except a huge black spider that lay coiled up in a corner of his den, ready to pounce upon any sophisticated fly that happened to come near. If a sleep or raking schooner, trusting to her quick heels, or the darkness of night, attempted to run past her, off her bows, each containing one heavy brass gun, and she was a prisoner at once. While the young man was watching her, all at once her sails were thrown off her yards, and in a time incredibly short to a landsman, her canvas was all spread, and the black creature now loomed up, white, lofty, symmetrical, and very beautiful. A slight breeze filled out her sails, and graceful and majestic was her movement. "There she goes bent on mischief as ever. She is now for Saybrook, or else for Deacon Mayo's farm! The villains! they are always on some mischief, and they never lie easy in the hammock unless they have done some robbery. I'll keep my eye on you old darkey, and it will cost you a halter for my neck, or else I'll save Joe! I'll save you again to-night. This will you wicked old jabe!"

He stood and watched her closely. She went about five miles, and again the sails were furling, the anchors dropped, and she lay the same dark thing upon the waters; the young man then descended the hill and was lost among the cedars.

A little past midnight following the morning we have described, the frigate lay in the same place. No light was allowed on board of her, the officer of the watch paced the deck with a measured tread, and no noise was heard save the drawing the chain from bow to stern every five minutes, lest some Yankee should be fastening his torpedo or some blow-up machine upon her keels or sides. The watch-boys lay off and around the ship, perhaps a mile or two distant, watching to hear or see anything that might stir. Presently the one of the boats were heard, indeed, it still plainly heard approaching. The nearest boat sent up a small rocket, a signal to the other boats. In an instant they were in motion, and by the time the stranger had come near, there were four of those guard-boats ready to fall upon her. When near enough, she was hailed in a suppressed voice, and answered "Harvey."

"All right."
"What have you got?"
"A load of nice apples."

One of the guard boats attended "Harvey" up to the ship's side, and reported to the officer of the deck. "Come aboard," was the next command, and a young man ran up the ladder and stood on deck. He first gave the officer a handful of apples, and he was then allowed to bring what he had on board, and after paying a heavy toll to the officer, was allowed to set the rest to the crew. He mingled with the men and listened to the tones of every voice, but was evidently disappointed. He listened for a voice which was not there. He was lingering and hesitating to spin out his time as far as possible, when the officer called him.

"Harvey, shouldn't you be off?"
"I can't sell all," said Harvey, in the true Yankee trade-with-me tone.
"Well, the next watch will be called shortly. But what did you say about deacon Mayo's farm?—did you say there are many cattle there?"
"It's a great farm, your honor, and the deacon usually keeps a great many cattle there."
"Indeed, I saw many there this very day." (The eye of the young man laughed; but it was dark, and his eye could not be seen. He had omitted to add that he had that day walked several miles to warn the deacon that the ship of war was near his farm, and he had better look out for his cattle, and that in consequence, every hoof had been driven away, that evening.)
"Good. We want some fresh meat. For though our good ship is called 'The Weasel,' not a mouse can she catch passing this way. We'll try the deacon's beef."

By this time the bell rung, and the new watch was called. Harvey, as he was called, mingled with the new-comers, joked, talked Yankee, sold apples, and was very busy. At length he edged his way up to a tall, noble fellow, who went by the name of Joe Strange.

"Don't you love apples, Joe?"
"Yes, but I've not a one in my locker. It's nothing to buy with, and you land lubbers don't give away things."

"Yes we do, sometimes. See now if we don't. Here's a Boy's sweeting. Joe started. "And here's a Loomis sweeting, and here's a Jack-apple!" In a low voice he added: "It grew in the lane, and was picked by my sister Lucy." Joe Strange said nothing, but as he took the apples Harvey took him aside.

"A Jack-apple! a Jack-apple!" cried several voices. "What's that? Is it a tree?"

"Here, here," said Harvey, handing any apple he could find in his possession. He felt well assured that Joe Strange would take good care of his. In a few moments more, Harvey was in his empty boat carefully rowing for the shore; and by daylight he was up in a little creek, Red Creek, where his boat was moored, and he went up among the bushes to lie down and rest. When he awoke from a short but sound sleep, the sun was already risen. He looked off towards the ship, and there she lay motionless and dark. "It seems like a dream," said he to himself, "that I have actually been off to the ship three times alone—that I have actually found my old friend and neighbor Joseph Collins on board, and that I have known him for so long;—if they only knew let poor fellow; I knew him though he did not know me the first time that I went aboard. But that apple! it will deliver or destroy him! and my own neck! were I to be caught here trading with the enemy's ship, I should be hung! no plea that I did it to rescue a friend would avail, for the simple reason that I could not prove my motives to be such. And if on the ship they should discover me tampering and trying to entice away one of their men, they would hang me at the yard arm! But I'm in for it, and I must and will rescue Joseph, if it is in my power. But I have a hard day's work before me."

It was late in the morning before Joe Strange, as he was called, could steal a moment to be alone, and he was then only as the officer of the deck bid him go aloft and secure a rope which seemed to have parted. Aloft he went, and having performed the duty, stopped a moment and took out an apple from his pocket. It was a fair-looking apple, but as he examined it he saw that it must have been cut in two and nicely fastened together again, with a very fine thread. On opening it he found a small roll of paper, on which was written: "You are not forgotten. If you wish to see the tree on which I grew, the next time you go ashore, day or night, contrive to lose your hat just before you land." Twice he read the words, then put the paper into his mouth, to be spit out by piece meal as he had opportunity. Taking a large nail from his pocket, he thrust it through the two sides of the apple, and threw it overboard. Its fall attracted the notice of the sentinel, but before he could think what it might be, it was out of sight. Joe came now to the deck with a buoyancy of step to which he had long been a stranger.

OLD LINE WHIGS.—The followers of Douglas in this state are very fearful that the whig party are about to be swallowed up by the abolitionists. In fact they proceed in their conventions, in an endeavor to break the force of the Nebraska wave—to denounce every Anti-Nebraska man as a red hot, seething abolitionist, ready at once to pull down the pillars of the constitution and rend the Union in pieces!

The organs of the party at the south follow suit, our friends of the State Register being particularly unhappy on that account. Says the Register: "To believe that the old line whig party of this region, peopled mostly by men of southern birth, will permit such a party to rule them, is calculating in opposition to every suggestion of common sense and experience. The old Henry Clay whigs will never be betrayed into such revolting alliance. The name of 'whig,' potent as it may be with them, will not be strong enough to bind them to an organization contemplating a series of measures which, if successful, may destroy forever this happy republic."

We do not know which the "old line whigs" in the Register's region would consider the worst, to be ruled by abolitionists or by the compromise breaking, harbor retreating, abolition appointing party of Senator Douglas and Gen. Pierce.

The Register, if it really has such a horror of abolitionists, should cut loose from the party to which it belongs, before advising "old line whigs" what to do. It should not forget that the prominent government offices of this state are held by abolitionists who were recommended by Senator Douglas, and who "betrayed their party into the revolting alliance" with men, who had publicly held him up to indignation for his views upon the subject of slavery.

When our good friends the democracy, who live among whigs of "southern birth," purge their own party of abolitionism, we think it will be ample time to give their counsel, and advice as to what whigs had better do in the premises.—Chicago Journal.

REMARKABLE ESCAPE.—During one of those violent thunder storms which occurred in this vicinity a week or two since, the house of Mr. Naigle, a short distance from this village was struck by lightning. Mr. J. S. Simonton and Mr. Smith, who happened to be out hunting, stopped in at Mr. Naigle's to wait for the shower to pass, and while in the house, Mr. Simonton set down his gun, which was a double barrel and both were loaded, in the corner, and took a seat not more than two feet from it. The fluid passed in at the chimney, down that to the top of the gun and down the outside of the gun, blowing the stock to pieces but discharging neither barrel, and killing Mr. S's dog, which lay at his feet. It was one of the most remarkable escapes from being instantly killed we have heard of for a long time, yet no person was seriously injured.—La Crosse Journal.

CROPS.—We have taken especial pains to make enquiries of our farmers as we have seen them in town, as to their crops in our section of country, and they all agree in saying that never before have they known of a more successful yield, or of its being better secured. The fall crops too are progressing finely. Corn promises abundantly, and in fact all kinds of produce appears to thrive here with special luxuriance. La Crosse county is a great place for farming, and it even astonishes western men to witness the productivity of the soil.—Bid.

THE CORN CROP.—Late accounts confirm the previous reports, that the corn crop in the lower and middle parts of this state and Missouri are a failure, and prices in that vicinity are advancing accordingly. The St. Louis News says, that farmers from the interior counties of Missouri are purchasing corn in St. Louis. A gentleman writing from Pike county, Illinois, says that not a bushel can be bought in his neighborhood for less than 40 cents a bushel. In this vicinity, and the northern part of the state generally, and in Wisconsin and Iowa, we hear that the corn crop promises remarkably well.—Galena Gazette.

Daniel Sullivan, who was arrested about three weeks ago in Janesville for the murder of Barney Caffrey, had his examination a few days ago in Milwaukee and acquitted, it being proved by the physicians that the man died of cholera.—Waukesha Democrat.

The last congress made appropriations of more than $69,000,000.

BY TELEGRAPH.

The following report came to our Milwaukee and Chicago exchanges Thursday, and would have been received and published by us yesterday morning, if the line had been working between here and Milwaukee:

HALIFAX, 17th.

The America, from Liverpool 5th, arrived at 5 P. M. yesterday.

Cotton market—buyers on the whole had rather the advantage.

An advance of 2s. on flour for the week had been realized—6d. 1s. per 70 lbs. on wheat—1s. 2d. on corn.

Western canal flour is quoted at 32s. 3d. 4d.; Baltimore and Philadelphia 32s. 6d. 3d. 4d. Corn 32s. 4d. 4d. for white, 32s. 3d. 4d. for yellow.

FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.—The news from the Danube continues generally favorable to the allies, but nothing decisive had occurred.

On the morning of the 30th ult., the Russians are stated to have attacked the Turkish and French camps at Giurgeni, but were totally defeated, with the loss of 2000 killed and a large number of prisoners. The Russians were retreating by forced marches. The evacuation of Wallachia was completed, and a proclamation had been issued declaring that all soldiers who remained behind would be considered deserters. The Russian troops were being concentrated in Sereth. Omar Pacha was expected to arrive at Bucharest 21st July, and would meet with a brilliant reception. It was believed that a force must be despatched to dislodge the Russians from Moldavia. The Russian army under Prince Lichtenstein is ordered to advance from Pesh to Gallicia. The army in Gallicia is moving towards the frontiers.

The Arch Duke Albert, has removed his headquarters to Cronstadt, on the south coast corner of Transylvania. The total Austrian force on the frontiers reach 300,000 men.

The frontiers have not been crossed; but preparations for hostilities were on a colossal scale. Russia makes no war-like demonstration towards the Austrian frontiers.

The cholera was increasing in Vienna. A French division left Varna the 26th, for Kustan-ges.

The accounts from Montenegro are satisfactory. Prince Daniel was assuming a threatening attitude towards the Turks at Asscutz.

BLACK SEA.—The allied fleets with Gen. Canrobert and Brown had proceeded towards the Crimea coast to reconnoitre.

The Times declares positively that a force of from 80 to 100,000 men, British, French and Turks, will invade the Crimea, and will attempt to effect a lodgment on the heights that command Sebastopol.

From Asia, the report of defeat of the Turks by the Russians is confirmed, and the Russians were besieging Kars.

Cholera has made its appearance among the British troops.

The Baltic fleet were at Letzend, at latest accounts.

Admiral Deedehaus has had an interview with the king of Sweden. His majesty declares his willingness to unite with the western powers, on certain conditions.

The French troops had joined the fleet off Alexandria. 400 British on 28th made a descent on Kaluga, in the island of Oesel, and after destroying four boats, returned. Since the 23d, the blockade of ports in the gulf, has been more vigorous, it not being possible for any vessel to enter or leave.

The Russian Arch-Duke Constantine, and the arch duchess, had a narrow escape from being captured by an English steamer near Cronstadt.

SPAIN.—Affairs generally tranquil and Esparto had taken oaths as president of the new council. On the 2d inst., the barracks at Madrid were being removed at Esparto's request. The nomination of O'Donnell is the most popular of any in the new ministry.

The bank of England fixed the minimum rate of interest at 5 per cent. on the 4th.

STAGE ACCIDENT.—We learn from Mr. Cyrus Miner, of this city, who was in the coach at the time, that a stage between Blue Mounds and Dodgeville, was upset last Tuesday forenoon, and all the passengers, nine in number, more or less injured. One man was so badly hurt that he was left at Dodgeville, and when first taken up was supposed to be dead. The driver escaped without injury.

THE SURE.—A lady correspondent of the Washington Union, who has been "going down to the sun" at Cape Cod, gives the following description of the aquatic enjoyment of the spot:

"The attendant upon the bath was taking a good part in the enjoyment, to wit, while immediately behind her crouched her daughter, a negro girl of twelve or thirteen years of age, laughing, and rolling the whites of her eyes in ecstasy at all that was going forward. Between a large tub of water in the corner of the bath and the attendant, the lady was seated, in all the various stages of disrobing; each instant upon her own arrangement, and strictly regardless of what was passing around her. Others were preparing for the bath, laying aside their dresses, or rather suffering them to be laid aside by their maids while the ladies came and went, removing their dresses and blankets, and exchanging greetings with their acquaintances.

For the first few moments we were doctored and bewitched; the sight of some dark females, only partially dressed, and that in garments perfectly saturated with sea water—the busy waiting maids passing and re-passing; or drying and combing the streaming hair of their mistresses—the subdued laughter and whispered gossip of a bery of lovely, chatting girls, murmuring along in an under current of sound—parades of romping children, apparently quite indifferent to the dense atmosphere, which made us struggle for breath—and to crown all, the sudden bursting forth of a chorus of girlish voices into one of the wildest, sweetest of negro melodies, that was caught up and flung back by the roar of the waves without—all combined to form a picture odd indeed.

Following the example of others, we exchanged our double wrapper for a woollen bathing dress, covered our hair, and, with the friend who had accompanied us, we hastily made our exit from this crowded Babel, and on crossing the threshold we were met by our male escort equipped for the sea. The slight outside that met our vision was still more bewitching than the one we had left. The sight of nearly one thousand persons in various costumes—the shrill, laughing cries of the bathers heard above the roar of the surf—parties of children in the arms of nurses, struggling for breath—the ladies, many in bright plaid dresses, with fancifully trimmed straw hats on their heads, and to end all, the appearance of the bathers as they came out, looking like a congregation of resuscitated corpses fevered into life, all combine to form a picture like the illusion of a dream, almost leaving the beholder in doubt whether that on which he looks is indeed reality, or the mere creation of a disordered brain. There is nothing very exclusive in the bath here, where the belle is placed in juxtaposition with her waiting maid; indeed, it would be difficult to distinguish them, as no costume in the world lends itself more readily or more conveniently to the purpose of disguise. One peculiarity is the utter disregard of many of the male bathers to being knocked down by the breakers and drowned. They will move out and out, and when warned that they are almost outside the breakers, they look as though they wondered at the wanton waste of words bestowed upon so insignificant a piece of information. How many of these reckless bathers escape drowning we cannot take upon ourselves to explain.

A LEGEND OF THE LAST WAR.
BY REV. JOHN TODD, D. D.

The land on the north side of Long Island Sound, along the southern borders of the good life state of Connecticut, is composed of hard hills covered with dwarf cedars, and the spreading juniper bush, and beautiful valleys which extend up among and between these hills. Particularly is this the case between New Haven and the Connecticut river. If the hills are barren, the valleys are proportionably fertile. This is decidedly the sunny side of Connecticut. Then the sound is a most beautiful sheet of water, whose gentle waves have made this whole shore a charming and beach. From any one of the hills which I have mentioned, the prospect is delightful. The eye takes in a wide expanse of waters, with vessels of every size, and name, gracefully moving in every direction under the hand of canvas, and ever and anon, the huge but beautiful steamboat is seen crowding her way past them all, sending out her two streams of smoke which seem to hang in the air as if not to be shaken off. On almost any day, the bright waters are now alive with all kinds of craft, while the distant shore of Long Island, and the many little islands scattered along the shores add to the beauty of the prospect.

But at the time of which I am about to speak, it was far otherwise. In the summer of 1813 no sail or craft of any kind was to be seen in the sound. The light-house kindled its nightly lamp, and the gulls on the low, flat islands kept up their night watches, but there was nothing to be seen. We were in war, and every wing of commerce was clipped. The British ships of war so completely blockaded the sound that nothing could move unless now and then a small boat was seen to glide along the shore, where, at a moment's warning, she could run into the mouth of some hidden creek, or skulk behind some island. It was a rare thing to see a sail.

On a bright September morning, on the top of one of those hills which overlooked the sound and which ran down till within a quarter of a mile of the water, stood a young man alone. He was dressed partly as a sailor and partly as a landsman, so that it would have been difficult to decide to which class he belonged. He was small of stature, firmly made, with an eye that flashed, and a mouth that shut as none but a determined man can shut his mouth. His face was not intellectual, but expressive of good humor, self-reliance, and perfect fearlessness. He was standing under a cedar, intently looking off upon the sound, and gazing upon a British frigate of the first class which lay anchored off about eight miles from the shore, and about midway between the two shores on the north and on the south. She lay so still and motionless, except as the tide veered her round once in six hours, that she could be compared to nothing except a huge black spider that lay coiled up in a corner of his den, ready to pounce upon any sophisticated fly that happened to come near. If a sloop or raking schooner, trusting to her quick heels, or the darkness of night, attempted to run past her, out flew her boats, each containing one heavy brass gun, and she was a prisoner at once. While the young man was watching her, all at once her sails were thrown off her yards, and in a time incredibly short to a landsman, her canvas was all spread; and the black creature now loomed up, white, lofty, symmetrical, and very beautiful. A slight breeze filled out her sails, and graceful and majestic was her movement. "There she goes bent on mischief as ever. She is now for Saybrook, or else for Deacon Mayo's farm. The villain! they are always on some mischief, and they never leave some rogues. I'll keep my eye on you old darkey, and it will cost one halter for my neck, or else I'll save Joe! I'll see you again to-night. That will, you wicked old jade!"

He stood and watched her closely. She went about five miles, and again the sails were furled, the anchors dropped, and she lay the same dark thing upon the waters; the young man then descended the hill and was lost among the cedars. A little past midnight following the morning we have described, the frigate lay in the same place. No light was allowed on board of her, the officer of the watch paced the deck with a measured tread, and no noise was heard save the drawing of the chain from bow to stern every five minutes, lest some blow-up should be fastening his torpedo or some blow-up machine upon her keels or sides. The watch-boat lay off and around the ship, perhaps a mile or two distant, watching to hear or see anything that might stir. Presently the oars of a boat were heard, muffled indeed, but still plainly heard approaching. The nearest boat sent up a small rocket, a signal to the other boats. In an instant they were in motion, and by the time the stranger guard-boat near, there were four of these guard-boats ready to fall upon her. When near enough, she was hailed in a suppressed voice, and answered "Harvey."

"All right."

"What have you got?"

"A load of nice apples."

One of the guard boats attended "Harvey" up to the ship's side, and reported to the officer of the deck. "Come aboard," was the next command, and a young man ran up the ladder and stood on deck. The first gave the officer a handful of apples, and he was then allowed to bring what he had on board, and after paying a heavy toll to the officer, was allowed to sell the rest to the crew. He mingled with the men and listened to the tones of every voice, but was evidently disappointed. He listened for a voice which was not there. He was lingering and haggling to spin out his time as far as possible, when the officer called him.

"Harvey, shouldn't you be off?"

"I can't trade all," said Harvey, in the true Yankee sold-with-no-tune.

"Well, the next watch will be called shortly. But what did you say about Deacon Mayo's farm? Did you say there are many cattle there?"

"It's a great farm, your honor, and the Deacon usually keeps a great many cattle there. Indeed, I saw many there this very day." (The eye of the young man laughed; but it was dark, and his eye could not be seen. He had omitted to add that he had that day walked several miles to warn the Deacon that the ship of war was near his farm, and that in consequence, every hoof had been driven away that evening.)

"Good. We want some fresh meat. For though our good ship is called 'The Wessel,' not a mouse can she catch passing this way. We'll try the Deacon's beef."

By this time the bell rung, and the new watch was called. Harvey, as he was called, mingled with the new-comers, joked, talked Yankee, sold apples, and was very busy. At length he edged his way up to a tall, noble fellow, who went by the name of Joe Strange.

"Don't you love apples, Joe?"

"Yes, but I've not a shov in my locker. I've nothing to buy with, and you land lubbers don't give away things."

"Yes, we do, sometimes. See now if we don't. Here's a Hog's head," Joe started. "And here's a Loomis' smoking, and here's a Jack-apple!" In a low voice he added: "It grew in the lane, and was picked by my sister Lucy." Joe Strange said nothing, but as he took the apples Harvey felt him shake.

"Here, here," said Harvey, handing any apple he could find in his measure. He felt well assured that Joe Strange would take good care of his. In a few moments more, Harvey was in his empty boat carefully rowing for the shore, and by daylight he was up in a little creek, Eel Creek, where his boat was moored, and he went up among the bushes to lie down and rest. When he awoke from a short but sound sleep, the sun was already risen. He looked off towards the ship, and there she lay motionless and dark. "It seems like a dream," said he to himself; "that I have actually been off to the ship three times alone—that I have actually found my old friend and neighbor, Joseph Collins, on board, shut up as a sailor! What would his old father and mother say, what would they say if they knew it? I poor fellow! I know him though, he did not know me the first time that I went aboard. But that apple! it will deliver or destroy him! and my own neck! I were I to be caught here trading with the enemy's ship, I should be hung or shot. I did it to rescue a friend would avail, for the simple reason that I could not prove my motives to be such. And if on the ship they should discover me tampering and trying to cut away one of their men, they would hang me at the yard arm! But I'm in for it, and I must and will rescue Joseph, if it is in my power. But I have a hard day's work before me."

It was late in the morning before Joe Strange, as he was called, could steal a moment to be alone, and it was then only as the officer of the deck bid him go aloft and secure a rope which seemed to have parted. Aloft he went, and having performed the duty, stopped a moment and took out an apple from his pocket. It was a fair looking apple, but as he examined it he saw that it must have been cut in two and nicely fastened together again, with a very fine thread. On opening it he found a small roll of paper, on which was written: "You are not forgotten. If you wish to see the tree on which I grew, the next time you go ashore, day or night, contrive to lose your hat just before you land." Twice he read the words, then put the paper into his mouth, to be spit out by piece meal, as he had opportunity. Taking a large nail from his pocket, he thrust it through the two sides of the apple, and threw it overboard. Its fall attracted the notice of the sentinel, but before he could think what it might be, it was out of sight. Joe came now to the deck with a buoyancy of step which he had long been a stranger.

(To be concluded.)

OLD LINE WHIGS.—The followers of Douglas in this state are very fearful that the whig party are about to be swallowed up by the abolitionists. In fact they proceed in their conventions in an endeavor to break the force of the Nebraska vote to "denounce" every Anti-Nebraska man as a red hot, geotching abolitionist, ready at once to pull down the pillars of the constitution and rend the Union in pieces. The organs of the party at the south follow suit, our friends of the State Register being particularly unhappy on that account. Says the Register: "To believe that the old line whig party of this region, peopled mostly by men of southern birth, will permit such a party to rule them, is calculating in opposition to every suggestion of common sense and experience. The old Henry Clay whigs will never be betrayed into such revolting alliance. The name of 'whig,' potent as it may be with them, will not be strong enough to bind them to an organization contemplating a series of measures which, if successful, may destroy forever, this happy republic."

We do not know which the "old line whigs" in the Register's region would consider the worst, to be ruled by abolitionists or by the compromise breaking, harbor vetoing, abolition appointing party of Senator Douglas and Gen. Pierce.

The Register, if it really has such a horror of abolitionists, should cut loose from the party to which it belongs, before advising "old line whigs" what to do. It should not forget that the prominent government offices of this state are held by abolitionists, who were recommended by Senator Douglas, and who "betrayed" their party into the revolting alliance with men, who had publicly held him up to indignation for his views upon the subject of slavery.

When our good friends the democracy, who live among whigs of "southern birth," purge their own party of abolitionism, we think it will be ample time to give their counsel, and advice as to what whigs had better do in the premises. —Chicago Journal.

REMARKABLE ESCAPE.—During one of those violent thunder storms which occurred in this vicinity a week or two since, the house of Mr. Naigle, a short distance from this village was struck by lightning. Mr. J. S. Simonton and Mr. Smith, who happened to be out hunting, stopped in at Mr. Naigle's to wait for the shower to pass, and while in the house, Mr. Simonton set down his gun, which was a double barrel and both were loaded, in the corner, and took a seat not more than two feet from it. The fluid passed in at the chimney, down that to the top of the gun and down the outside of the gun, blowing the stock to pieces but discharging neither barrel, and killing Mr. S's dog, which lay at his feet. It was one of the most remarkable escapes from being instantly killed we have heard of for a long time, yet no person was seriously injured. —La Crosse Republican.

CORNS.—We have taken especial pains to make enquiries of our farmers as we have seen them in town, as to their crops in our section of country, and they all agree in saying that never before have they known of a more successful yield, or of its being better secured. The fall crops too are progressing finely. Corn promises abundantly, and in fact all kinds of produce appears to thrive here with special luxuriance. In Crosse county is a great place for farming, and it even astonishes western men to witness the productivity of the soil. —Id.

THE CORN CROP.—Late accounts confirm the previous reports, that the corn crop in the lower and middle parts of this state and Missouri are a failure, and prices in that vicinity are advancing accordingly. The St. Louis News says, that farmers from the interior counties of Missouri are purchasing corn in St. Louis. A gentleman writing from Pike county, Illinois, says that not a bushel can be bought in his neighborhood for less than 40 cents a bushel. In this vicinity, and the northern part of the state generally, and in Wisconsin and Iowa, we hear that the corn crop promises remarkably well. —Glen Gazette.

Daniel Sullivan, who was arrested about three weeks ago in Janesville for the murder of Barney Caffrey, had his examination a few days ago in Milwaukee and acquitted, it being proved by the physicians that the man died of cholera. —Waukesha Democrat.

The last congress made appropriations of more than $30,000,000.

The following report came to our Milwaukee and Chicago exchanges Thursday, and would have been received and published by us yesterday morning, if the line had been working between here and Milwaukee:

ITALY, 17th.

The America, from Liverpool 5th, arrived at 5 P. M. yesterday.

Cotton market—buyers on the whole had rather the advantage.

An advance of 2s. on flour for the week had been realized—6d. a bushel on wheat—1s. 2d. on corn.

Western corn flour is quoted at 32s. 3d. 6d.; Baltimore and Philadelphia 32s. 6d. 3d. Corn 32s. 3d. 6d. for white, 32s. 3d. 6d. for yellow.

FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.—The news from the Danube continues generally favorable to the allies, but nothing decisive had occurred.

On the morning of the 30th ult., the Russians are stated to have attacked the Turkish and French camps at Giurgiuva, but were totally defeated, with the loss of 2000 killed and a large number of prisoners. The Russians were retreating by forced marches. The evacuation of Wallachia was completed, and a proclamation had been issued declaring that all soldiers who remained behind would be considered deserters. The Russian troops were being concentrated in Servia. Omar Pacha was expected to arrive at Bucharest 21st July, and would meet with a brilliant reception. It was believed that a force must be despatched to dislodge the Russians from Moldavia. The Russian army under Prince Liechtenstein is ordered to advance from Pesth to Galicia. The army in Galicia is moving towards the frontiers.

The Arch Duke Albrecht, has removed his headquarters to Constantinople, on the south east corner of Transylvania. The total Austrian force on the frontiers reach 300,000 men.

The frontiers have not been crossed; but preparations for hostilities were on a colossal scale. Russia makes no war-like demonstration towards the Austrian frontiers.

The cholera was increasing in Vienna. A French division left Varna the 20th, for Kustan-gees.

The accounts from Montenegro are satisfactory. Prince Daniel was assuming a threatening attitude towards the Turks at Asscutz.

Black Sea.—The allied fleets with Gen. Canrobert and Brown had proceeded towards the Crimea coast to reconnoitre.

The Times declares positively that a force of from 80 to 100,000 men, British, French and Turks, will invade the Crimea, and will attempt to effect a lodgment on the heights that command Sebastopol.

From Asia, the report of defeat of the Turks by the Russians is confirmed, and the Russians were besieging Kaes.

Cholera has made its appearance among the British troops.

The Baltic fleet were at Letzend, at latest accounts.

Admiral Dechelles has had an interview with the king of Sweden. His majesty declares his willingness to unite with the western powers, on certain conditions.

The French troops had joined the fleet off Andalusland. 400 British on 28th made a descent on Kalgia, in the island of Oesel, and after destroying four boats, returned. Since the 23d, the blockade of ports in the gulf, has been more vigorous, it not being possible for any vessel to enter or leave.

The Russian Arch-Duke Constantine, and the arch duchess, had a narrow escape from being captured by an English steamer near Constantinople.

Spain.—Affairs generally tranquil and Espartero had taken oath as president of the new council. On the 2d inst., the barracks at Madrid were being burned at Espartero's request. The nomination of O'Donnell is the most popular of any in the new ministry.

The bank of England fixed the minimum rate of interest at 5 per cent. on the 4th.

STAGE ACCIDENT.—We learn from Mr. Cyrus Miner, of this city, who was in the coach at the time, that a stage between Blue Mounds and Dodgeville, was upset last Tuesday forenoon, and all the passengers, nine in number, more or less injured. One man was so badly hurt that he was left at Dodgeville, and when first taken up was supposed to be dead. The driver escaped without injury.

Spoke of the Sun.

A lady correspondent of the Washington Union, who has been "going down to the sea" at Cape Island, gives the following description of the aquatic enjoyments of the place:

The attendant upon the bath, was taking a prominent part in the conversation, as usual, while immediately behind her crouched her daughter, a negro girl of twelve or thirteen years of age, laughing, and rolling the whites of her eyes in ecstasy at all that was going forward. Besides a large tub of water in the center of the bath, there were several ladies' just from the surf, in all the various stages of disrobing; each intent upon her own arrangement, and utterly regardless of what was passing around her. Others were preparing for the bath, laying aside their dresses, or rather suffering them to be laid aside by their maids whilst the latest comers were removing their shawls and bonnets, and exchanging greetings with their acquaintances.

For the first few moments we were deafened and bewildered, the sight of some dozen females, only partially dressed, and that in garments perfectly saturated with sea water—the busy waiting maids passing and re-passing; or drying and combing the streaming hair of their mistresses—the subdued laughter and whispered gossip of a body of lovely, chatting girls, murmuring along in an under current of sound—parades of romping children, apparently quite indifferent to the dense atmosphere, which made us struggle for breath—and to cynicism, the sudden bursting forth of a chorus of girlish voices into one of the wildest, sweetest of negro melodies; that was caught up and sung back by the roar of the waves without—all combined to form a picture odd indeed.

Following the example of others, we exchanged our double wrapper for a woolen bathing dress, covered our hair, and, with the friend who had accompanied us, we hastily made our exit from this crowded Babel, and on crossing the threshold we were met by our male escort equipped for the sea. The sight outside that met our vision was still more bewildering than the one we had left. The sight of nearly one thousand persons in various costumes—the shrill, laughing cries of the bathers heard above the roar of the surf—parties of children in the arms of nurses, struggling for breath—the ladies, many in bright plaid dresses, with fancifully trimmed straw hats on their heads, and to end all, the appearance of the bathers as they came out, looking like a congregation of resuscitated corpses, fanned into life, all combine to form a picture like the illusion of a dream, almost leaving the beholder in doubt whether that on which he looks is indeed reality, or the mere creation of a disordered brain. There is nothing very exclusive in the bath here, where the bells are placed in juxtaposition with her waiting maids; indeed, it would be difficult to distinguish them, as no costume in the world lends itself more readily or more conveniently to the purpose of disguise. One peculiarity is the utter disregard of many of the male bathers to being "knocked down by the breakers and drowned." They will move out and out, and when warned that they are almost outside the breakers, they look as though they wondered at the wanton waste of words bestowed upon so insignificant a piece of information. How many of these reckless bathers escape drowning we cannot take upon ourselves to explain.

 and MORTGAGES for sale at this Office.

The case of Gustavus Hollander, on an indictment for larceny, was tried yesterday. This case grew out of an association called the "Journemen cigar makers of the city of Chicago," of which the defendant was secretary. It was charged that he received, from time to time, money belonging to the society, and converted the same to his own use, with intent to steal. The trial occupied the whole day, and resulted in a verdict of "not guilty." The jury were out only about five minutes. P. Balling and Thomas Shirley, esqs., for the prosecution; J. A. Thompson and J. O. Miller, esqs., for defendant.—Chicago Tribune, yesterday.

The Roman Catholic priest at Port Jarvis, N. Y., was lately liberal in the use of the horse-whip upon some of the faithful. In the ecstasy of the work, however, some of the blows missed the church and fell outside upon one Daniel B. Brown, who forthwith caused his reverence to be arrested for assault and battery, who was found guilty and fined $50.

BY TELEGRAPH!

(REPORTED FOR THE JANEVILLE GAZETTE.)

New York, Aug. 18th.

Intelligence received here announces that

Jerome Bonaparte has received the same appointment in France as (he held here. The suspension of the cotton house of Sheldon & Co.,

it is believed, will only be temporary. The reported failure of the silk house is untrue.

The Arctic will sail tomorrow, with nearly 1,000,000 in specie.

Bills on the Farmer's and Merchant's bank

BOOTS AND SHOES
 JUST RECEIVED AT THE Wisconsin Boot & Shoe Store
 104 N. Main, Janesville, Wis.

best and finest stocks of Boots and Shoes that I have ever before brought to Jancerville, and what is more, I have them at less than the prices of any other place than I have ever sold before, notwithstanding the great advance in the Eastern Market. My assortment of in particular, I have no hesitation in saying cannot be equaled in the State, both for style and durability, being all made to order, and in such a manner that I can guarantee every article sold, with understanding, and all those that do not like to do, come up to the warrant, and they shall be money free of charge.

GENTLEMEN'S WEAR.
In this line I know beyond a doubt that I can show you a finer assortment and at better prices than twenty-five per cent. than can be found at any of the dry-goods or Dry Goods stores about town. I want it said in plain understanding that I make the BOOT AND SHOE TRADE my speciality. I have a large stock of More and know more about the trade, than the whole pile of petty dealers put together. And I know also that I can make it an object for Every Farmer in Rock County, as well as every one that trades in Janesville to buy their Boots and Shoes of me.

Manufacturing.

I want to say a few words to you in regard to my Manufacturing business, to wit: That I am now engaged more extensively in the manufacturing business, and probably am selling more custom work than all the shops about town put together, simply for these reasons—that I use better Stock, being entirely of Eastern tannage, which every one knows is worth twenty-five per cent more than the common western tanned leather; and what is a better reason and of greater importance, I can sell my Custom Work at Much Lower Prices and at the same time sell you a better article than you can get at the shops, for this reason, which you may all see is a very palpable one; that in buying my goods you cast and in such large quantities, I of course save very large per cent, and thereby can sell at lower prices and at the same time make my profit.

 I want to state further that I have secured the services of Mr. BUCHANAN, who has formerly been engaged in the manufacture of silver, and is now a great and skilful worker, and who is known by every one to be the manufacturer in the city; and if we don't get you un a better article, both in regard to style and dura-ably, we will forfeit our money and our reputation and I pledge you my word that this is no small forfeit.

Leather and Findings.

I have just received over $3,000 worth of the very best brands of Eastern Sole & Upper Leather; also a very large assortment of FRENCH and ITALIAN, ALPINE KIP and FRENCH CALF SKINS; together with a full assortment of MOROCCOS of every kind, which I will sell at Precisely Milwaukee and Chicago Prices.

I have constantly on hand, also, a large assortment of all kinds of FINDINGS, LASTS, BOOT TEEBS, CRIMPES etc., etc., all of which will be sold at the same rates.

I request the attention of manufacturers in town as well as in the country to my stock, as I think I can make it an object for you to buy of me. At least, I can sell you a much superior article to that which you get of the pedlers.

TO THE LADIES;

I would say that I am under very great obligation for the partiality you have shown me, in always procuring your understandings from me, and I now publicly promise and swear that I will make every one of you who may be entitled to the same as present of a handsome pair of CACKS, when I shall have closed up my shoe selling career. I would say further, that I am prepared to set up to order any style of work you wish, at low rates. Yours respectfully,

H. B. DINCOCK, Proprietor, T. H. BUCKENHAM, Foreman.

By the way, don't forget the location of the Institution, three doors above the Post Office, Jacksonville, Waconstein.

are almost instantly removed by the simple application of the Electric Chains, which are constructed so as to permit of their being worn, producing a constant current in the system of uninterupted Electricity, which has been found after many years has been discovered to possess STRANGE AND WONDERFUL POWER, IN THE INSTANT RELIEF AND PERMANENT CURE of nervous diseases.

HISTORY

Polymers which are presented to the public, as the most scientific and convenient mode of applying this powerful agent. They have been secured by patent in the United States, and have been (invented) England, Germany, Austria, Belgium, and many other countries. They are used in every Hospital in the State of New York, and highly recommended by professors Valentine Mott, J. M. Burns, Post, Carochian, of that city, who daily make use of them.

[illegible]

Electricity is not more frequently increased in severity than in relief, by the oil naturally given of giving medicine into the stomach. If people will only become realistic and think for themselves, and believe that physicians are sincere in their attention to their patients, they will not pay any heed to the "fables" of the "cure of all ills" (which means very much), make free use of pure cold water, internally and externally, with an occasional dash of soap, sleep in freely ventilated rooms, retire early and rise early, be happy and cheerful, and be content with the simple and good food of "no physic" — by so doing health and happiness will be secured. Bottled molasses and water be at a discount, and its famous discoverers be assigned to their legitimate stations.

The Hydro-Electric clinics are now for the first time quicker, and safer mode of curing all nervous disorders, than any other method or means hitherto discovered. They can be used by either a grown person or a child, are always ready for use, and with little care will last for years.

CAUTION.

Ladies who are enfeebled, are requested not to wear corsets, for by long use, miscarriage is apt to be produced.

Price of Chains, $4 to $5, and can be sent by mail

France, where they were invented) England, Germany, Austria, Belgium, and one year since, introduced into the United States, and also received by patent. They are used in every Hospital in the State of New York, and are used by the celebrated Valentinus Masi, Surgeon at New-Burgh, Post, Carpenters of that City, who daily make use of them in their practice.

THE WORLD IS CHALLENGED

To produce so many well authenticated certificates of cure, not only from intelligent patients, but from accredited Physicians. The sale now in New York is perfectly exhausted, and the demand is so great, that the Crystal Palace where they are on exhibition, seldom fails to attract a chain before they are allowed to quit. . . .

It thinks to be the common sense of the people who are beginning to become disgusted with the practice of a dangerous Surgery, that their somewhat narrowing but the effects before mentioned, will be the result of a cure, to no more effect in even relieving, much less curing, the disease for which they are recommended, than a poor Man's Plaster applied to the top of the head would be in curing an inflamed of worms.

It is a fact, that the most successful recoveries, by which every ill in this flesh is heir to, is eradicated from the earth—strange as it may seem—are made by men who are too ignorant to obtain a thing by any other mode, and their knowledge of disease, its proper mode of cure, and its prevention, is not used, and the result is the same as if a man, of a certain complexion, a little taller or shorter, or of a certain age, were to use a medicine, or a deny the truth of this, and no Physician dare risk his reputation as an honest man, and declare that nerveous weakness are not more frequently increased in severity than nerveless weakness. The latter is a giving mind, and the former a stupid one. People will only believe what they wish to believe, and will not think for themselves, and believe that physicians practice upon their credulity more than they practice upon their intelligence, and that they pay strict attention to temperance in all things, (which means very much) make free use of pure cod, scoter, selenite and cerefolium, with an occasional dash of soap, sleep in freely ventilated rooms, retire early and rise early, be happy and cheerful, employ their physicians to tell them "they require no medicine"—by so doing health and happiness will insure themselves, and the physician will not be deceived, and his famous discoveries be consigned to their legitimate stations.

The Hydro-Electric. clinics are now for the first time offered to the people of Nashua, as being a better, surer, and safer mode of curing all nervous diseases, than any other mode, and the only one that is truly great.
